Anchorage Superior Court Judge

Date: 9-14-11

I have lived in Alaska since 1990. After graduating from Northeastern University School of Law, I accepted a Law Clerk position with Chief Judge Robert Coats for the Court of Appeals. I spent the subsequent year in Kodiak at the Public Defender Agency, but returned to Anchorage in 1992. I worked as an Assistant Public Defender, representing clients in serious criminal and civil trials, until 1997. I then joined the court system; first as a pro tem District Court Judge, then a Committing Magistrate and finally, as a Superior Court Master. Since 2007, I have exclusively served as a Master, hearing a wide variety of civil matters.

I have two school-age children.
