Position(s) for which you wish to be considered:

Alaska Supreme Court

Date: Jan. 27, 2012

I grew up (although some would dispute the validity of this narrative already) in upstate New York, attending undergraduate school in Buffalo and law school at Harvard. I moved to Alaska directly after law school and have lived here in Fairbanks since 1980. I clerked for the late Chief Justice Rabinowitz for a year; worked in private practice with Charlie Cole for a year; worked for Alaska Legal Services for 28 years as staff attorney, supervising attorney and executive director, providing legal aid to low-income Alaskans in civil matters; and then came to the AG's office in 2010, doing primarily consumer protection and tobacco enforcement work. My extremely patient wife Robyne and I have been married almost 25 years (I told you she was extremely patient) and we have two sons, Martin and Jeremiah, both attending UAF. My life has been more fun than these 150 words make it sound.
